Feedback from the people I referred

The UI is too cartoonish and some menus when opened and when we get back it just comes to home straight up.

Person 1 — [Shivansh]

Did not like: Didn't list his bank

Liked: liked the UI

Where they stalled: too much permissions

Would they keep using it: NO

Person 2 — [Rishabh]

Did not like: really hated the UI and app feels sluggish

Liked: color scheme

Where they stalled: giving the permissions

Would they keep using it: NO

Person 3 — [Sajal]

Did not like: giving too much information to the app

Liked: the idea of the app

Where they stalled: giving gmail permissions

Would they keep using it: NO

My own feedback, as the fourth user

Since my own run is the one piece of user feedback I can fully evidence, the short version is here and the detail is in the Task 1 teardown.

Didn't like: refunds counted as income, which puts INR 13.9K of unearned money into a INR 26.38K income figure. INR 0 shown for spending while income is populated, with no explanation of what the app could not see. Unlink failing with a toast on the screen whose entire purpose is giving me control. Net worth clamped to INR 0 and labelled "Liabilities exceed assets" when I have entered no liabilities.

Liked: the pre-permission explainer, which tells you what the app can and cannot do before Google's consent screen rather than after. Download-my-data and delete-my-data as first-class controls. The onboarding is fast and does not demand a bank login up front.

Would I keep using it: not until the spending side shows something, because that is the thing I would have installed it for.
